DUKE LAW
Dear Fellow ISNIE Members:

This 18th Annual Meeting reflects how far ISNIE has come since its inception in 1997. The Society has expanded its geographic representation, strengthened its excellent scholarship, and perhaps most strikingly, broadened its academic approaches in the pursuit of understanding institutions and organizations. The Program Committee scrutinized hundreds of submissions from scholars on six continents to craft a program of academically superb papers employing a variety of theoretical and empirical approaches. The papers span a wider disciplinary breadth than ever before, including economics, political science, management, psychology, sociology, history, anthropology, law, statistics, and biology, in pursuit of a deeper understanding of institutions and organizations. Indeed, our keynote speakers, Robert Gibbons and Timur Kuran, are indicative of the breadth of interests of the Society, traversing fields from economics and management to political science, history, and Islamic studies. The extent of today's disciplinary interests in institutions and organizations, as conceived by new institutional economics, is a credit to all the scholars that have entered into and conducted research in our field, many of whom appear on the Program. This is an exciting and wonderful evolution of ISNIE!

This conference has been fortunate to be co-sponsored by Duke University. In particular, the Duke Law School staff has worked tirelessly to create and support a conference that is both exciting and engaging. We have also received generous financial contributions from various units on the Duke University campus, including the Fuqua School of Business, the Economics Department, the Political Science Department, the Social Science Research Institute, and the Law School.

The Program Committee is honored to present to you the program of our 2014 Annual Meetings. Enjoy!

About ISNIE

What is New Institutional Economics?

The New Institutional Economics (NIE) is an interdisciplinary enterprise combining economics, law, organization theory, political science, sociology and anthropology to understand the institutions of social, political and commercial life. It borrows liberally from various social-science disciplines, but its primary language is economics. Its goal is to explain what institutions are, how they arise, what purposes they serve, how they change and how - if at all – they should be reformed.

ISNIE Mission Statement

ISNIE encourages rigorous theoretical and empirical investigation of these topics using approaches drawn from economics, organization theory, law, political science, and other social sciences. The Society makes a special effort to encourage participation from scholars around the world, with membership from over 46 countries. ISNIE is committed to young scholars as well as those from developing and transitional economies.

Presentation of Awards
Keynote Speakers

Robert Gibbons’s research and teaching concern the design and performance of organizations, especially “relational contracts” (informal agreements so rooted in the parties’ circumstances that they cannot be adjudicated by courts). He is a faculty member in MIT’s Sloan School and MIT’s Department of Economics, where he teaches management and PhD courses (respectively) and has received teaching awards from each. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Econometric Society, and the Society of Labor Economists, founding director of the NBER working group in organizational economics, and a former board member at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences and at the Citicorp Behavioral Science Research Council. His text Game Theory for Applied Economists (Princeton University Press, 1992) has been translated into Chinese, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, and Spanish, he co-edited The Handbook of Organizational Economics with J. Roberts (Princeton University Press, 2013), and his forthcoming Introduction to Organizational Economics (Princeton University Press, 2016) is intended to make the field accessible to a broad set of theoretical and empirical economists and other researchers.

Timur Kuran is Professor of Economics and Political Science, and Gorter Family Professor Islamic Studies, at Duke University. His research focuses on social change, including the evolution of preference and institutions. His most recent book, The Long Divergence: How Islamic Law Held Back the Middle East (Princeton University Press, 2011), addresses the role that Islamic institutions played in the economic rise of the Middle East and, subsequently, in the institutional stagnation that accompanied the region’s slide into underdevelopment. Some of the archival work on which this book was based has been published as a ten-volume tri-lingual set entitled Economic Life in Seventeenth-Century Istanbul, as Reflected in Court Registers (İş Bank Cultural Publications). Kuran’s earlier publications include Private Truths, Public Lies: The Social Consequences of Preference Falsification (Harvard University Press, 1995) and Islam and Mammon: The Economic Predicaments of Islamism (Princeton University Press, 2004), each translated into several languages.

Plenary Speakers

John Conley completed his undergraduate work at the University of Chicago and received his Ph.D. from the University of Rochester in Economics in 1990. From 1989 until 2002 he taught in the Economics Department at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. Since then he has been a Professor of Economics at Vanderbilt University. He is the co-founder and first president of the Association for Public Economic Theory (APET), the co-founder and editor of the Journal of Public Economic Theory (JPET) and the open-access letters journal, Economics Bulletin (EB). His research is primarily in public economic theory, general equilibrium and cooperative and non-cooperative game theory. More recently, his work focused on the economics of innovation and of information and communications technology.

Ning Wang was educated at Beijing University and the University of Chicago. He is mainly interested in new institutional economics of development and China’s transition to a market economy. With Ronald Coase, he co-authored How China Became Capitalist (2012). He is editor-in-chief of Man and the Economy, a new journal founded by Ronald Coase. He is Senior Fellow of the Ronald Coase Institute and International Director of the Ronald Coase Center for the Study of the Economy at Zhejiang University.
